The integration, partnership and participation of the three levels of government – federal, state and city – have always supported the commitments of the Brazilian Olympic Movement. The joint task and solid guarantees were the foundation of the success for the City of Rio de Janeiro to host the 2016 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

The Country

Brazil is the leading Latin American market, has the fifth largest population of the planet and is ranked as the eighth economy in the world. In 2010 registered a GNP of US$ 2.1 trillion, with a 7.5% growth and a direct foreign investment of US$48.5 billion, a record number in absolute values.

During the last years Brazilians have benefitted from a stable economic growth, low inflation rates and improvement in the social wellbeing. The country extends over 8.5million square kilometers with 190 million inhabitants instilled with the spirit of the preparation to receive the two most important sport events of the planet: the 2014 World Cup and the Olympic and Paralympic Games Rio 2016.

Well known for the magnificent nature and the contagious energy of the population, Brazil also relies on its dynamic and enterprising private sector, where companies of the industry, mining, agricultural and technological areas contribute for the surplus of the balance of trade.

Within this scenario the Country continues its course towards a sustainable development and takes on a outstanding profile in the international community leading areas as mutual cooperation, climate changes, agricultural technology, trade, bio-fuels, biodiversity and social programs.

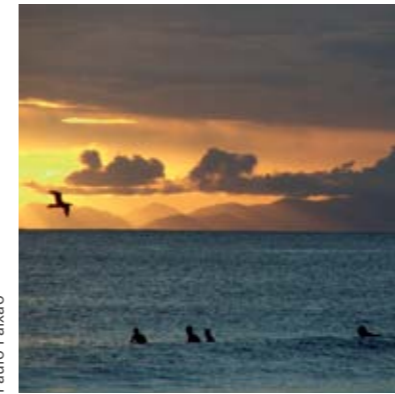

One of the largest world democracies, Brazil is a Presidential Federative Republic composed of 26 states and one Federal District(Brasilia).- governed by solid , independent and coordinates institutions.
